

ARRIVAL OF THE CANAWBA.
U. S. Mailsteamer Canawba. R. W. Shufeldt,

THE NEW KING AND THE OLD.

NEW-MEXICO.

The Supreme Court of the Territory was in session, Judges Davenport, Brochus and Benedict being present. Gen. Pelham, Secretary General of the Territory, had arrived at Santa Fe.

SMALL POX AMONG THE UTAH INDIANS—We learn that the small pox has broken out among the Utah Indians and been quite fatal. Several of the leading men of the tribe had died, and among others Chico Velasquez, the chief. We regret the death of this chief. He had become very friendly within the last year; he had more influence with his tribe than any other man in it, and seemed disposed to restrain their evil propensities.

all these have made him an object of respect and of veneration to every class of men. We know we are in vain to the monster that directs THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE, and the brood of bad men that echo his hateful cries against the just and the good; but we are not so to the angels that surround him, and the angels of any other element; but his own wicked and unrepentant malignity. To such a man God himself must at last become hateful; and when this is so, how can he be expected to display charity and good will to man? The grave is not a barrier to his revenge; the gallantest of his warriors are his ministers; his eyes are his eyes; a free people, happy in their freedom, see his eye-balls become their eyes; happy, religion wakes no answering throb in his stagnant heart; and nothing rouses his enthusiasm but a wretch who, like the guilty angel, when expelled from heaven, directs to the earth his fiercest and most unrelenting hatred, and irreverent hurls against every virtuous and noble principle.

PUBLIC MEETINGS

The choir then sang a hymn.

The Rev. T. L. HARRIS said he would make a compact statement, in part, of what modern Spiritualism is, though the attempt was like one to compress Homer into a verse, or the Bible into an aphorism. He divided his subject into subjective and objective; the former, relating to the intellect, the latter to manifest-future happy; it proves the bible, and gives incentive to obey the law promulgated from Calvary. Thus, there being nothing, in nature or religion or morality, to condemn the system, why not pursue it? If it be said it is the product of the spirit of evil how are we to know what is of the spirit of good? How can it be stayed?

Persecution cannot put it down. It grows daily in a mighty current which, if not controlled, may sweep

Mr. TILSTON called the meeting to order, and nominated the following officers: George Griswold, Chairman; Vice-Presidents—Patrik Perit, Andrew Foster, Mortimer Livingston, Wm. H. Aspinwall, J. W. Phillips, Wm. Neilson, Wm. Whitlock, E. E. Mangan, David Ogden, Thos. Dunham, Wm. T. Fro Oliver Slate, John J. Boyd. Secretaries—Robert G. Cline, Charles Lawton.

"The Senator from Louisiana, risen and says: 'I am requested to urge the passage of the bill prepared by Mr. Fish and oppose that prepared by the merchants of New York.' Mr. Seward regretted that his colleague should have left the bill in other hands, and have said nothing to him on the subject. Now, the time has come when the merchants and ship owners should express their views of Senator Fish's conduct."

and American Settlement Company, No. 110 Broadway, and signed by the officers of these affiliate associations. It seems to have been designed as preliminary to a public meeting of the friends of the movement, which it hoped to render more efficient.

The next speaker was Dr. J. E. Snodgrass, the Vice-President of the Settlement Company. The Chairman, in introducing him, said he was glad to present a southern-born man—a native of Virginia.

Another of the young men whose names appear on the above programme, as one and all were well received by the audience, and at intervals, during the delivery of their speeches, loudly applauded. The several orations and dissertations were finished productions, and would have done credit to older heads. The oratorical and perticularation of the various speakers were good, and did credit to the Professor in that Department.
